party, my fellow citizens, is the only party whose life has persisted and whose vigor has continued throughout all the history of this nation, and that has not happened by accident. It has happened because it is the only party, I venture to say, all of whose life has been governed, or, at any rate, inspired, by a definite principle—an absolute belief in the control of the people, their right to control, their capacity to control, their own affairs and shape them in the common interest.

ocratic party has committed many errors, the democratic party has made some fatal mistakes of action, but the reason it has lived, the reason it is the only party that has apparent immortality in our politics, is that it is the only party that has consistently based its beliefs upon the things and the convictions that underly all American history—the belief in the government of the people by themselves and their own

"What was the spirit of those parties? The spirit of those parties was one of limited control of the affairs of the nation by those who had the biggest material stake in the prosperity of the country. Some of them professed this very openly and some of them practiced it without professing it. The theory of Alexander Hamilton, who founded the federalist party, was that the best kind of government is government by guardians and trustees, and that only those who represented the great material enterprises of the country are capable of acting as trustees and guardians. So that throughout the period when the federalist party was in control the whole idea was that a small group of care

It does not interfere with the running, and I am very much astonished to see the company that some gentlemen who spell their names with a capital are keeping. They are engaged in the interesting enterprise of trying to capture a party which is already, captured by those who believe in their principles, the intellectual processes by which they arrive at their conclusions are entirely obscured to my intelligence.

"But you will notice that a party that merely wants control does not have to have any principles. That is the reason why surprise that a program has not been anounced is unreasonable. Look over the ranks of the supporters of the republican party. Did you ever see a more motley company in your life. Did you ever see elements so absolutely contradictory of each other as the elements of that party? If they moved in any direction, they would have to move in many directions; and if I am trying to get into power by the support of people that do not agree with one another, it is very dangerous for me to profess my own opin

"This thing is becoming a fraud and a sham. We have been taking care of some people, but we have not been taking care of the great body of the people. We have not thought about their morals; we have not thought about their health; we have not thought about their rights as human beings, and we insist that you put the policy of this party in our hands or we will go off and form a party of our own."

Some want to inject politics in order to move in one direction, and others want to do it in order to move in exactly the opposite direction. In these circumstances, it is not wise to announce your direction. Some of them are progressives, or were, and profess themselves dissatisfied with the present leadership and guidance of the party, and others are so well satisfied with it that they are afraid that the entrance of this new element will disturb some of their favorite plans, and so, looking at each other with suspicion, they have only one enthusiasm, and that is the enthusiasm to 'get in.' One thing has become evident, not because it was explicitly stated, for nothing has been explicitly stated, for nothing has been explicitly stated, but because it is unmistakably implicit in almost everything that has been said. Am I not right that we must draw the conclusion that if the republican party is put into power at the next election our foreign policy will be radically changed? I cannot draw any other inference. All our present foreign policy is wrong, they say, and if it is wrong and they are men of conscience they must change it, and, if they are going to change it, in what direction are they going to change it? There is only one choice as against peace, and that is war. Some of the supporters of that party, a very great body of the supporters of that party, a very great body of the supporters of that party, a very great the success of the republican party is that we shall be drawn in one form or other into the embroilments of the European war, and that to the south of us the force of the United States will be used to produce in Mexico the kind of law and order which some American investors in Mexico consider most te their advantage. thing, indeed. "The conference which is being held with regard to Mexican affairs is embarrassed every day by the apparent evidence which is being produced that hostility to Mexico is being traded upon by one of the great political parties. These gentlemen may reconcile these influences with patriotic purpose, but it is difficult for all of us to do so. And the one thing I want to lay emphasis upon in this connection is this: That a great, fundamental, final choice with regard to our foreign relationships is to be made on the 7th of November. "I am not saying this in jest. I am not saying it out of my personal experience. Until the present administration Wall street controlled the actions of the Treasury of the United States. I do not like those words, Wall street, because there are some men who see things large and see them true; there are some men with fine statesmanlike gifts, and I do not like to include them; but the main impulse in Wall street is not given to it by them. Therefore, I, for my part, altogether and the confihas disappeared. I do not mean the legitimate lobby—the lobby that will go to the hearings of committees and argue their case in public with the reporters present—but I mean the buttonholing lobby; I mean the lobby that uses influence and not fact, that understands some special interests and does not give a cent for the general interest. That is the lobby I mean, and the little cowards scuttled the minute they were mentioned. I had only to say in a casual interview with the reporters and interview with the reporters of the press that there was such a lobby, when all at once the rats began to scuttle.

"So the instrumentalities of control have been destroyed, and the object of the present campaign on one side is to party and you have an absolute standard. You know which way we are going. The question is—do you want to head us off? And it is for the young men of the country in particular to

The point of view of the young man is of the horizons. He looks abroad upon a wide world, because he is choosing his path. He looks curiously upon many of the aspects of human affairs because he hopes and intends to play a part of importance in some of them. And so the young men have the impulse, the momentum, the whole vision of the people more intensely in them than the older men who have grown a little tired, some of them, grown a little tired, some of them, grown a little discouraged, some of them, have had many hard knocks and suffered many disappointments, but who yet, nevertheless, with stubborn courage and steadfast strength, are themselves struggling toward the light.
